Report of the School Board

FOR THE YEAR 1886-7.

It was the wish of your School Board, by the union of some of the smaller schools, to secure for every pupil in town, not less than twenty weeks' tuition. An approximate success was attained.

Schools No. 1 and No. 4 were united. The attendance being double that of any other school in town, assistance was furnished for half the day. The time of schooling was 26 weeks and 2 days.

In the case of No. 5 and No. 9, 14 weeks were allowed in the nearest school house, with the opportunity of attending school in the adjoining district, if they chose to do so. They attended only in their own neighborhood.

One term of ten weeks was held in No. 10 school house, to which the members of the next district in Raymond were admitted. In return, the members of this school were entitled to a Fall term in Raymond. As some found it more convenient to attend school No. 5, the exchange was less equal than was at first intended, but all had the privilege of twenty weeks at school.

We think the appropriation for a high school was a judicious one, and if the experiment be tried, as we trust it may, a second year, we believe that the benefits will be still more apparent. Eighteen attended the fall term, and thirty-four in the winter many of whom had already been at school in their own districts the rest of the year.

In reviewing the year, we find that about one hundred of those in actual attendance upon school during the past year have had their tuition materially lengthened, and we do not know of any who find themselves losers by the present arrangement, unless it should be that not attending the regular spring and fall terms they unexpectedly failed of admission to the High School in the winter.

We regret that, through any misunderstanding, a single case of dissatisfaction should have arisen. If there is any more truly impartial method of distributing the school funds than that adopted during the past year, it will be the aim of your committee to realize it; but we earnestly hope none will neglect any opportunity within reach.

The comparative length of terms for different schools during the years 1885 and 1886, may be seen from the statement for the two years, which is here appended, together with the whole number of pupils registered in different schools during the present year. This is a little higher, for the year than for a single term, as some are registered in two schools, according to the exchange before mentioned.

HINTS FOR FURTHER PROGRESS.

We must not be impatient with the criticism that the results of teaching are not always sufficiently practical. For, though we may not always look for practical returns from all the "treasures of knowledge," the object of elementary instruction is to enable a child to use all its faculties to the best advantage. "We learn to do by doing;" therefore the sooner a pupil is set to do something as a test of what he has learned the better.

Suppose that the Arithmetic class, studying in Compound Numbers, should some day be requested to give estimates of the school building or premises, and that measurements, afterwards made, should be compared with their guesses; would not such an experiment quicken their powers of observation? Or, give them the table for Linear Measure and help them to form from this, the tables for square and solid measure, and they will have something besides memory to depend upon, for their figures. Exercise the older pupils in writing orders, receipts for money, promissory notes with endorsements, and their recitations will not be in an "unknown tongue."

Let not the end and aim of the study of Geography be to secure fluent recitations in statistics of any or every land. He studies the United States to some purpose, who has such a vivid idea of its extent, its endless variety of climate and productions and its abounding resources, as shall make him eager to learn more. Recitations from maps, drawing them from the book and from memory, taking imaginary journeys, contributing facts and anecdotes not given in the text book—all these means have been used by wise teachers to inspire and instruct their classes.

When a child has acquired a good handwriting, its vision and range of occupation are greatly enlarged. Therefore put it in possession of this gift, as early as may be. Blackboard work, which is now happily gaining ground, is made a delightful and helpful exercise to the primer class, who learn to read written characters, readily, after they have acquired the printed ones, and along with this, to write, themselves. At this stage, children should be taught to form sentences, this they will do, in answer to questions, when a picture or an object is shown to them. Then they are ready to write a short sentence of their own. The teacher's ingenuity should lead them on by telling them short stories, or by giving them words to combine into sentences—to a larger exercise of this power.

Notice also, and help them to notice, in a kindly spirit, those mistakes in conversation which are of most frequent occurrence. In all these ways they may be learning "to speak and write the English language correctly," sometime before it will be necessary for them to take up, in Grammar the formal rules by which to judge their work.

And, let teachers who desire to take a high rank, guard themselves, carefully against certain slips in grammar, and in the pronunciation of words in common use.

Concerning the use of the voice in reading and recitation, it is difficult to speak with discrimination. Paradoxical as it may seem, children usually have to be taught how to speak in a sweet, clear and natural tone. Left to themselves, their voices in recitation are wont to be low and indistinct. If simply bidden to "speak louder," young voices are often strained, in the heroic attempt to make themselves heard, till the result is almost a shriek.

An exercise of two minutes a day, upon vowel sounds and certain difficult combinations, in a low key, (perhaps sometimes in a whisper) will train them in fullness of tone, and distinctness of articulation—two essentials to good utterance.

We may honestly commend the industry and fidelity of our teachers this year, while the skill, ardor and self-forgetfulness of some, are worthy of the highest appreciation. Those who seek hints for further improvements, may find them in the general suggestions. Beyond this we prefer not to point out special deficiencies, which teachers themselves have already recognized, or which have been otherwise indicated to them.

The value of experience has been fully evident, but some young teachers give much promise for the future. Only let them press on in the search after the best methods of bringing their work to perfection, nor fancy that they have reached "high water mark" too early in their experience.

To those teachers who are always learners ; who find an increasing and absorbing interest in their work, who consider that time well spent which is devoted to giving new meaning or fresh attraction to the simplest lessons ; who, studying to know the deepest wants of every child, learn how to arouse a worthy ambition, and how to reach the heart and conscience ; whose control of their pupils is such as to teach them the far higher lesson of self-control, and obedience to the great law of right, to these we extend our congratulations. They have set before themselves a great work, but they shall have joy in their work.
